With unrivaled policymaking experience at both the national and state levels, Pete Mitchell brings a deep understanding of what it takes to effect change. From chief of staff for a veteran United States Senator to staff director overseeing the Florida budget process, he has accumulated extensive knowledge of the intricacies of public policy development.

For more than 35 years, Mitchell has served in senior managerial positions, where he has been heavily involved in complex problem solving and managing relationships between key stakeholders. Throughout his wide-ranging career, he has been engaged in a wide array of policies that impact budgets, taxes, financial services, healthcare, environmental regulation and human services. His strong management background has made him an indispensable aide to numerous elected officials, culminating in his 14-year tenure as chief of staff and campaign manager for U.S. Senator Bill Nelson of Florida. He also served Florida's elected Insurance Commissioner as deputy treasurer and chief of staff, following service as staff director for the Florida House Committee on Appropriations. Mitchell also provided expert consulting guidance to one of Florida's most prominent legal and lobbying firms, representing client interests before both the executive and legislative branches.

Mitchell has deep Florida roots, earning a bachelor's degree in political science from the University of Florida and a master's degree from Florida State University.

Pete Mitchell is a passionate advocate for his clients and their issues, combining his decades of experience with a thorough understanding of the relationships and processes necessary to steer any issue toward success.
